Cologne captured by Franks

AD 460

a monk by the name of DANIEL mounted a pillar 66 ft high when he was 51 years old (in imitation of his master, ST. SIMEON STYLITES.

Except when he was forced off by high winds, he stood there almost naked for 33 years till his death. He was baked by the blazing midday sun, and coated with ice on winter nights. His emaciated body was encrusted with foul-smelling filth, his his matted hair and beard were interlaced with lice, and his feet were almost taken away by disease.

Each evening a charge of clunkers was ladder to the top of the column and gave him long - suffering mother his one meagre meal of the day. There a Zembar too I persuaded him. There a small cart placed over his head, & protected him from the worst of the elements.
